

LIVES ALTHOUGH HE IS GIVEN BIG SHOCK

Patrick Riley, aged 17 years, is alive today, despite the fact that at the state training school Saturday he grasped a live wire of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company. The wire carried a voltage of between 2200 and 2300 and Pat grasped it when dared to do so by his companions. He could not let go and his comrades did not know what to do.

The engineer at the training school rushed to his assistance. He told Pat not to grasp him, and tried to free him by pulling at his coat. Pat grabbed at him and he caught him by the lower part of his trousers and pulled him free.

Much of Riley's hand was badly burned and some of the flesh was torn off when he was pulled away. That he was not instantly killed is the surprise of everybody who knows the deadly effect of electricity. For some reason or another he got off little the worse, with the exception of a burned hand.

The engineer received a slight shock in pulling Riley free.

DRAMATIC NEWS

ANNA HELD'S ALL-STAR JUBILEE NEXT SATURDAY

The sixth American tour of Anna Held will include a visit to this city at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, December 6th.

This time she brings her All-Star Variete Jubilee company; under Mr. John Cort's management she has gathered a coterie of the very creme de la creme of European and American stars, which include such notables as George Beban, with a complete company, in that international successful playlet, "The Sign of the Rose," Ward & Curran, pre-eminent in comedy, the Imperial Pekinese, entertainers "by command" of European Royalty, Francis and Florette, stars of the art of terpsichore, Herschel Hendler, a pianophile, rival of the great Paderewski, Chas. Ahearn and company of ten, in a riotous screaming funny sensational act "Wheels Within Wheels," while Mme. Anna Held, herself, will offer a playlet requiring the services of a serene beauty chorus in a startling Parisian novelty, entitled "Mlle. Baby."

It goes without saying the scenic environment will be entirely adequate, and Miss Held's costumes and jewels are wonders of Paris creations, which can be seen far in advance of American styles.

This All-Star company travels in a special train, consisting of Miss Held's private car, two compartment cars, two baggage cars and a dining car, with her imported French chef, waiters, maids, valets, porters, etc., and a retinue of servants in fact John Cort, has arranged a trans-continental tour, the most comprehensive of its kind ever attempted, covering two hundred and twenty-five cities in less than two hundred and seventy-five days.

"THE GIRL OF THE NORTH" AT GRAND DEC. 9-10

Strange and weird, like the half-mysterious person from which it takes its name, Eugene Walter's superb drama of the Canadian woods, "The Girl of the North," which will be produced at the Grand theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday evening, December 9th and 10th under the auspices of the Loyal Order of Moose, and direction of McNaughtan Bros., stands in a class by itself. It is one of the strong melodramatic type, with scenes laid in the forests of the north and characters just like one would expect to find there.

The opening scene shows the cabin of McTavish, an old Scotch trapper, standing in a lonely forest. He lives the old man and his daughter, Hilda. She is an innocent girl, whose life has been made even more hard to bear because of a hatred her father seems to bear her mother whom she resembles, deserted him long ago.

Then comes a railroad civil engineer named McDonald, and his young assistant, Huntley. McDonald, who is a man of small principle but brilliant education, at once lays siege to Hilda's heart. Her suitor is a young trapper named Jules Baubeln, who quickly discovers the deceit in McDonald's purpose. The old man is led to believe in him, and consents to McDonald taking Hilda to the city. Jules and a companion, Batiste, discover in McDonald the man who led his sister astray and deserted her, and they are determined to thwart his plans with Hilda.

The last scene shows Jules, Baube and Hilda, together with young Huntley going down the river. Behind them comes McDonald. Sending the others onward, Jules waits for him, and there is a fierce struggle in the dark by the campfire, ending in the death of McDonald.

C. J. McNaughtan will play the role of Jules; Ed. Ristine, McTavish; Jack Berry, McDonald; Steve Henderson, young Huntley; R. W. Ferris, Batiste; and Miss Ollie McGee, Hilda McTavish. The play will be appropriately costumed and special scenic and lighting effects will be used to make the play more realistic.

"WITHIN THE LAW" AT GRAND THIS EVENING

"Within the Law," Bayard Veiller's phenomenally popular new American drama in which Margaret Illington, direct from a record breaking run in Chicago, will appear at the Grand Opera House this evening, is a play of such universal appeal and tremendous dramatic power that it attracts many persons whom the theatre does not ordinarily interest. Women, especially are interested in the nerve-grIPPING struggle of a good girl to retain her integrity although persecuted by persons high in official authority, while among men there is a similar feeling for the brave and daring young woman who is forced to match her wits against the brutality of the police. In addition, such classes as judges, lawyers, in fact all who have dealings with the machinery of justice, are irresistibly drawn to "Within the Law" because of the illuminating manner in which the play treats of certain questionable methods employed in detection of crime and the punishment of offenders.

Miss Illington, whose personal success in the leading role has been declared one of the most notable acting triumphs of recent years, is surrounded by a large and adequate supporting cast which includes Howard Gould, Neil Moran, Frank E. Champ, Robert Elliott, Hilda Keenan, Sonia Jasper and a dozen others.
